Indian Oil to set up new POL terminal at Andaman & Nicobar amid rising fuel demand

The oil marketing company (OMC) is currently in the process of acquiring land for the proposed POL terminal, and expects the operationalisation in the next five years.

State-run Indian Oil Corporation (IOC) is planning to set up a new POL (Petroleum, Oils and Lubricants) terminal in Andaman and Nicobar Islands, at a time when the fuel demand in the region is seen as rising, with an aim to operationalise the facility in five years.

The oil marketing company (OMC) is currently in the process of acquiring land for the proposed POL terminal, and expects the operationalisation in the next five years, Rakesh Kumar, chief terminal manager at Indian Oil said.

The capacity of the new terminal is yet to be finalised.

"The storage capacity needs to be increased in Andaman & Nicobar and we are currently looking for land (for the new POL terminal). The capacity will depend on fuel demand projections," said Kumar.

POL terminals are storage facilities set up by oil marketing companies for distribution of refined products in an area. Currently, Indian Oil has one POL terminal with a capacity of 27,847 KL and is solely responsible for meeting the fuel demand of the island. Other state-run OMCs including Bharat Petroleum (BPCL) and Hindustan Petroleum (HPCL) do not have operations in the area.

Diesel, petrol, LSHF HSD (low sulphur high flash high speed diesel - a grade of diesel used by Indian Navy ships, aviation turbine fuel (ATF) and liquefied petroleum gas (LPG) are the five petroleum products consumed in the island. In Andaman & Nicobar, IOC receives refined products at the POL terminal
