The path to a developed India passes through its villages: VP

New Delhi, Feb. 17 (PIB)

The Vice-President of India, Shri Jagdeep Dhankhar today said, "I am the son of a farmer. A son of the farmer will always commit himself to truth. He further added, "India's soul resides in its villages, with the rural system serving as the backbone of the nation. The path to a developed India passes through its villages. A developed India is no longer just a dream; it is our goal," emphasizing his deep-rooted connection to agriculture.

Addressing the gathering at the inauguration of Advanced Entrepreneurship and Skill Development Programme (A-ESDP) Campus at National Agri-

Food and Biomanufacturing Institute (NABI), Mohali, Shri Dhankhar further said, "If we look into our historical past, India was known to be a land of knowledge and wisdom, particularly in science, astronomy and what not. Every aspect of human life finds reflection in our Vedas, Upanishads, Puranas. And we are a nation that takes pride in having ancient institutions like Nalanda, Takshashila and the kind.

Speaking on the significance of research, the Vice-President laid out a clear vision: "All institutions in the country will have to pass the litmus test.

And the litmus test is-what impact is being created? In a positive sense, it should be like an earthquake, with the impact being felt. A research for the sake of research, a research that is for the self, a research that is to be kept on the shelf, the research that comes out as a personal embellishment is not the research which the nation needs. Research is not giving a paper by scratching the surface. Research is not to impress the one who is ignorant of the subject. Research is to impress those who know the subject as much as you know or more than you know at a global benchmark. And that research can't be just abstract academics. The research has to have impact on what we are doing. And I'm sure this is an area where you have enough scope," he noted.

Reiterating India's civilizational strength, he stated, "The century belongs to Bharat."

Shri Dhankhar called for the revitalization of rural economies through micro-industries that add value to agricultural and dairy products. "There must be evolution of a mechanism in a village or in a cluster of villages where you have micro industries at the farm that add value to the agro produce, that add value to the livestock produced, milk produced. This will help evolve a sustainable society and the nutritional food value will certainly go up. What stops us from having entrepreneurial skills to produce ice creams, paneer, sweets, and the like in village clusters? This is very important because it will generate employment and satisfy rural youth."

He further emphasized that technology must be integrated into farming practices to improve efficiency and productivity saying, "Startups are there in Tier-2 and Tier-3 cities. They have to trickle to villages now because agriculture produce is lifeline of economy, raw material for industry. And when this takes place, close to the farmland in the rural firmament, evolving as a cluster, economy will take a jump, and people will believe in the farmland."

Shri Dhankhar urged farmers to stay informed about advancements in technology and its potential benefits. "A farmer is by and large clinging to his tractor. He wants to use the tractor for as long as it can last, ignorant of the fact that new technology is becoming environment-friendly, fuel-efficient, multifunctional, and highly subsidized. There has to be an awareness campaign," he emphasized.

Matsya-6000: India's Fourth-Generation Deep-Ocean Submersible successfully Completes Wet Testing

500-Meter Depth Demonstration by end of 2025

Unmanned, without buoyancy module

Unmanned, with buoyancy module

3 human inside the submersible, Manned with buoyancy module

New Delhi, Feb. 17 (PIB) — Following the completion of the design phase, various subsystems vital to M a t s y a - 6 0 0 0 ' s functionality were identified and developed. The submersible features a comprehensive array of components: a main ballast system for diving, thrusters for movement in all three directions, a battery bank for power supply, and syntactic foam for buoyancy. It also includes a sophisticated power distribution network, cutting edge control hardware and software, along with advanced underwater navigation devices. Communication systems include an acoustic modem, underwater telephone, and VHF for surface communication, supplemented by underwater acoustic positioning and GPS for precise surface location tracking.

Inside the spherical hull, careful attention has been given to the integration of human life-support systems, displays of various environmental/critical parameters, navigation joysticks for manoeuvrability, as well as various oceanographic sensors, underwater lighting and cameras outside the hull. All these subsystems have been indigenously designed and are currently undergoing thorough integration and qualification testing.

To ensure a seamless integration of all systems within its exo-structure, the Matsya underwent a comprehensive series of integrated dry tests over a 500-meter operational range. Following the successful completion of these tests, Matsya was transported to the L&T Shipbuilding facility located at Kattupalli Port, near Chennai during 27 Jan to 12 Feb, 2025 for conducting wet tests and demonstrating the s u b m e r s i b l e functionality.

The tests aimed to meticulously assess Matsya's performance across several critical parameters. Evaluations focused on the robustness of power and control networks, floatation and stability of the vehicle, human support and safety systems, and maneuverability within limited degrees of freedom, specifically forward and reverse motion. Additionally, navigation and c o m m u n i c a t i o n capabilities were scrutinized. The scientific payloads, which included multiple sophisticated oceanographic sensors, were thoroughly tested and demonstrated to confirm their intended functionality. This demonstration phase featured eight dives in total, comprising five unmanned dives and five manned dives. Each manned dive was rigorously qualified, ensuring the reliability of the life support system.

Due to the restricted water depth in the harbour, underwater voice communication was less effective, highlighting the necessity for further testing at greater depths to enhance confidence in shallow-water operations. In certain areas, additional efforts are needed to achieve optimal performance and c o m p l e t e n e s s . Nevertheless, the successful wet test of the Matsya6000 at the harbour bolstered confidence for conducting shallow-water demonstrations at depths reaching up to 500 meters by the end of 2025.
