A step towards 'Zero Waste Islands' Administration taking significant strides towards efficient waste management focusing on effective segregation & recycling

Port Blair, July 7

In pursuit of a cleaner and greener Andaman and Nicobar Islands, waste segregation has emerged as a crucial component of the waste management chain. The Administration's ambitious goal of achieving Zero Waste Islands necessitates a comprehensive approach towards managing solid waste, with a focus on effective segregation and recycling.

With 26 Solid Waste Management (SWM) Clusters strategically set up across the Islands, mapped to 70 Gram Panchayats (GPs), the Administration is taking significant strides towards efficient waste management. These clusters serve as pivotal points for waste collection, segregation, and onward processing. However, since the SWM cluster is designed to receive segregated waste only, mixed waste often coming from households, Commercial Establishments and Institutions pose a serious threat and health hazard derailing the entire chain and objective.

In rural, the collection and management of waste is devolved to the third tier of local governance i.e. Gram

Panchayats. With the network of Sanitary Workers attached to the Gram Panchayats and through a systemic developed Waste Collection Calendar, focus has been laid to cover 100% households, commercial establishments and institutions within rural jurisdiction.

The Department has issued detailed SOP on Waste Management and SOP on key roles and responsibilities of functionaries in the Waste Management chain.

The SWM cluster is separately provisioned to treat Dry Waste and Wet Waste separately. Wet waste, such as kitchen scraps and organic materials, are directed towards pit composting facilities. In rural, wet waste from individual household is encouraged to be managed in situ within individual premises. This can improve the soil quality and content, further enhancing the green vegetation.

Dry waste, including paper, plastics, glass, and metals, undergoes meticulous segregation. It is then baled and sent onward for recycling. This step significantly reduces the volume of waste that ends up in landfills and contributes to the conservation of natural resources by promoting the reuse of materials.

The forward linkage established with recyclers ensures that segregated dry waste is efficiently transported to the mainland for recycling. This collaborative effort not only promotes responsible waste management but also supports the circular economy by reintroducing recycled materials back into the production cycle.

The impact of waste segregation in the Andaman and Nicobar Islands is multifaceted. Firstly, it mitigates environmental pollution by reducing the amount of waste disposed of in landfills or incinerated. Secondly, it conserves valuable natural resources by promoting recycling and reuse. Thirdly, it contributes to the health and well-being of island communities by creating cleaner and safer living environments.

Furthermore, the emphasis on waste segregation aligns with the Administration's vision of transforming the Islands into Zero Waste Islands. This ambitious objective underscores the commitment to sustainable development

Campbell Bay, July 7

A three-year-old child with a blocked nostril was brought to the Primary Health Centre (PHC), Campbell Bay at 0600 hrs on July 3, 2024. The on-duty staff discovered a foreign object lodged deep in the nose of the child, posing challenges for removal. Post attempts to remove the foreign body from the nose and discussions by the local civil doctors of PHC, the case was found to be beyond their capability. Therefore, at around 1215 hrs, Surgeon Lt Cdr Naveen Kumar, a Surgical Specialist of the Indian Navy who was on-duty at the medical camp, was urgently called for assistance by PHC staff. He immediately rushed to IMS Hospital at Campbell Bay, collected the required surgical instruments and reached the PHC immediately.

He skillfully and safely removed the foreign object from nostril of the child within 15 minutes. The foreign body was found to be one large piece of chickpea, more than 10 mm in diameter. The piece was stuck at the nasopharynx about 5 cm deep inside the nasal cavity of the three year old child. The chickpea was removed by the officer using surgical instruments available at IMS.

The Naval Medical Officer's expertise and prompt action prevented the foreign body from entering the bronchus of the child, thereby averting a potential emergency situation and preventing the need of evacuating the child to Port Blair.
