

Vice-President addresses inaugural Annual Conference on Indian Knowledge System in New Delhi

India's rise as a Global Power must be accompanied by the rise of its Intellectual and Cultural Gravitas: Vice-President

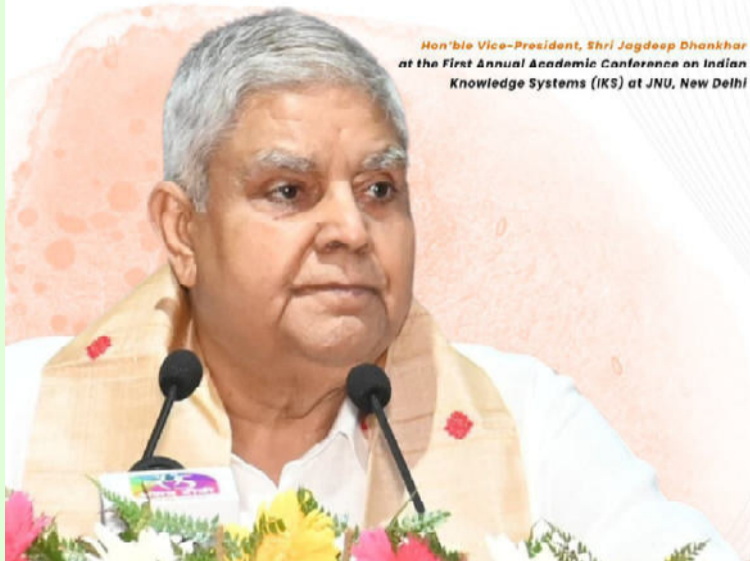

New Delhi, July 10 (PIB)

The Vice-President of India, Shri Jagdeep Dhankhar, today said, "India's rise as a global power must be accompanied by the rise of its intellectual and cultural gravitas. This is very significant as the rise without this is not lasting, and the rise without this is not in harmony with our traditions. The strength of a nation lies in the originality of its thought, the timelessness of its values, and the resilience of its intellectual traditions. That is the kind of soft power that endures, and soft power is potent in the world we live in", he said.

Reaffirming India's identity beyond the confines of post-colonial constructs, the Vice-President observed, "India is not just a political construct formed in the mid-20th century. It is a civilizational continuum—a flowing river of consciousness, inquiry, and learning that has endured."

"Long before the Universities of Europe came into being, Bharat's universities had already established themselves as thriving centers of learning, he said. Our ancient land was home to luminous centres of intellectual life—Takshashila, Nalanda, Vikramashila, Vallabhi, and Odantapuri. These were the towering citadels of knowledge. Their libraries were vast oceans of wisdom, housing tens of thousands of manuscripts."

The wisdom of the past does not obstruct innovation, rather it inspires it. The metaphysical can speak to the material. Spiritual insight can coexist with scientific precision.

Hon'ble Vice-President, Shri Jagdeep Dhankhar at the First Annual Academic Conference on Indian Knowledge Systems (IKS) at JNU, New Delhi

He added, "These were global universities, where seekers came from lands near and far, such as Korea, China, Tibet, and Persia. These were the spaces where the intellect of the world embraced the spirit of Bharat." Calling for a more holistic understanding of knowledge, the Vice-President said, "Knowledge resides beyond manuscripts. It lives in communities, in embodied practices, in the intergenerational transmission of wisdom." He emphasised that, "A genuine Indian Knowledge Systems research ecosystem must honour both the written word and the lived experience—recognizing that insight emerges as much from context as it does from text."

Calling for focused action to strengthen Indian Knowledge Systems, the Vice-President remarked, "Let us therefore turn our attention to tangible action because that is the need of the hour. The creation of digitized repositories of classical Indian texts is an urgent priority covering all classical languages such as Sanskrit, Tamil, Pali, and Prakrit, to name just a few."

He added, "These repositories should be made widely accessible, enabling scholars in India and researchers around the world to engage meaningfully with these sources. Equally essential is the development of training programs that empower young scholars with robust methodological tools, blending philosophy, computational analysis, ethnography, and comparative inquiry to deepen their engagement with the Indian knowledge system."

Quoting renowned scholar Max Müller, the Vice-President said, "If I were asked under what sky the human mind has most fully developed some of its choicest gifts, has most deeply

'Pashu Paksi Aur Hum' -A Radio initiative by Department of AH &VS

Sri Vijaya Puram, July 10

The Department of Animal Husbandry & Veterinary Services has launched a farmer outreach programme through Akashvani (All India Radio) to disseminate information about schemes, emerging technologies, and updates in the field of Animal Husbandry. Livestock is predominantly owned by small and marginal farmers, many of whom live in remote and scattered rural areas where various means of communication are ineffective. Reaching these farmers consistently has long been a challenge. Recognizing that radio continues to be a popular and effective medium in rural communities, the Department has introduced an engaging radio programme titled 'Pashu Paksi Aur Hum', centered around the theme 'Swasth Pashu, Samridh Kisaan'.

This initiative features live, interactive call-in sessions and talk shows designed to (Contd. on last page) needs, and elaborated on how the roadmap was shaped through an inclusive process of regional consultations, a national workshop, and extensive multi-stakeholder engagement. Dr. V.K. Saraswat reflected on the evolving role of State S&T Councils. He emphasized the need for enhanced techno-administrative leadership, robust Science, Technology and Innovation (STI) data systems, and the importance of bringing research institutions, industries, and grassroots innovators onto a common platform. "To respond to the demands of the 21st century, our State S&T Councils must operate not only as administrative units but as integrated innovation ecosystems," he said.

Delivering the keynote address, Dr. Jitendra Singh underlined the strategic importance of transforming State S&T Councils into mission-oriented institutions. He urged State Governments to align their science and technology efforts with local developmental priorities and emphasized greater industry engagement to support innovation funding through co-financing mechanisms. "States should not rely solely on Government allocations - industries must also be seen as partners in the innovation value chain," he remarked.

efforts of the island's fish farming community in boosting fish production and supporting nutritional security.

The event was graced by Dr. K. Gopal, Joint Director (Fisheries), and Shri Chittaranjan Raul, Scientist (Aquaculture), ICAR-CIARI, along with senior officials of the Department of Fisheries. Recognizing the contribution of the fish farmers of the Islands in enhancing the fish production and nutritional support, 13 fish farmers from Sippighat Panchayat were provided with quality fish seeds of Indian Major Carps at free of cost.

Addressing the gathering, Dr. K. Gopal highlighted the significance of National Fish Farmers Day, which commemorates the groundbreaking achievement in Indian aquaculture by Professor Dr. Hiralal Chaudhury and Dr. K.H. Alikunhi, who successfully demonstrated the induced breeding of Indian Major Carps.

He also briefed the gathering on the Department's continuous efforts in enhancing fish seed production and making it accessible to farmers across the Islands. He urged fish farmers to adopt scientific and modern aquaculture practices to improve productivity, boost their income, and enhance the availability of freshwater fish in local markets-contributing significantly to food and nutritional security.

A special technical session on 'History and Recent Trends in Aquaculture in India' was delivered by Shri Chittaranjan Raul, wherein he emphasized the importance of species diversification, adoption of climate-resilient aquaculture practices, and the growing potential of ornamental fish culture.

As a gesture of appreciation, the Department also felicitated dedicated fish farmers who have consistently supported the induced breeding programme by offering their fish ponds for breeding activities, a press release from Fisheries Deptt. said.
