Significant step towards enhancing air connectivity to A&N Islands

Airbus A321 makes successful night landing at defence airfield INS Utkrosh

Port Blair, June 28

In a major stride towards commencing night operations of civil flights at Port Blair, an Airbus A321 with 68 passengers onboard landed at the defence airfield INS Utkrosh of Andaman and Nicobar Command (ANC) at around 7.40 pm today. The aircraft then proceeded to Veer Savarkar International Terminal and disembarked the passengers. This successful night landing marks a significant step towards enhancing air connectivity to ANI, benefiting Islanders and boosting tourism.

This landmark event was made possible through consistent efforts by the Indian Navy, ANC and the Airports Authority of India (AAI) over the past few years. The airfield has undergone major upgrades, including navigational aids and has achieved the status of a precision airfield. Other crucial work, such as runway resurfacing and a Precision Lighting System with approach lights have also been completed.

Meanwhile, AAI upgraded the Instrument Landing System (ILS) to CAT-I and created a modern Veer Savarkar International Airport to accommodate the anticipated increase in tourist inflow.

All mentioned airfield facilities have been commissioned and calibrated with the help of AAI. New approach procedures have been formulated validated and approved for operational use by AAI. These efforts culminated in today's successful landing of the aircraft with passengers.
