This remote Indian beach just made it to Asia's Top 10-and it's not where you think!

Radhanagar Beach in the Andaman and Nicobar Islands is recognized as the fifth best beach in Asia in Trip Advisor's 2025 rankings. Known for its soft white sand, crystal-clear waters, and tranquil surroundings, the beach offers a perfect escape with opportunities for swimming, snorkeling, and witnessing spectacular sunsets.

When one thinks of India's best beaches, Goa often comes to mind. However, tucked away in the remote Andaman and Nicobar Islands lies a breathtaking gem-Radhanagar Beach. The beach was recently ranked as the fifth-best beach in Asia in TripAdvisor's Travelers' Choice Best of the Best 2025 rankings. So why does Radhanagar Beach deserve this recognition?

Located on Swaraj Dweep, Radhanagar Beach is renowned for its soft, powdery white sand, clear turquoise waters, and lush tropical surroundings. It's the kind of beauty one does not forget easily. We are quick to admire beaches in foreign countries, finding them incredibly attractive, while often overlooking the gems in our own backyard. This recognition serves as a reminder for us all to appreciate India's attractions with a fresh perspective.

Unlike the over-crowded beaches of Goa, Radhanagar offers tranquility, making it a perfect escape for those seeking peace and natural beauty.

Reasons why Radhanagar Beach is special?

Pristine natural beauty

Radhanagar Beach remains unspoiled, with strict conservation efforts in place to protect its ecosystem. The beach stretches for about two kilometers, offering ample space for visitors to bask in its scenic grandeur. The ivory-white sand and the emerald-green waters makes for a picture-perfect setting.

Crystal-clear waters and thrilling water activities

The clear, shallow waters are ideal for swimming and snorkelling. The beach is home to vibrant marine life, making it a haven for activities like snorkelling and scuba diving. The waters here remain clean and undisturbed.

Spectacular Sunset

Radhanagar Beach is often called the 'Sunset Point of India' for a reason. As the sun dips below the horizon, the sky is painted in hues of orange, pink, and purple, creating a stunning spectacle. The breathtaking sunset views alone make a visit to this beach worthwhile.

Tranquility and serenity

Unlike many popular beaches that are filled with tourists, vendors, and noisy activities, Radhanagar Beach retains a sense of solitude. What to look out for? The sound of gentle waves and the rustling of palm trees.

How to reach Radhanagar Beach

To get to this paradise, travelers must first reach Sri Vijaya Puram, the capital of the Andaman and Nicobar Islands. From there, a ferry ride to Swaraj Dweep (2 to 2 1/2 hrs.) followed by a short drive of about (30 minutes) leads to Radhanagar Beach. (Source: timesofindia.com dated Mar.9,2025)
