In a significant boost to India's startup ecosystem, the Department for Promotion of Industry and Internal Trade (DPIIT) has approved 187 startups for income tax exemption under the revamped Section 80-IAC of the Income Tax Act. Notably, the decision came during the 80th meeting of the Inter-Ministerial Board (IMB), held on 30th April, 2025.

According to a spokesperson of DPIIT, the tax benefit allows eligible startups a 100% income tax deduction on profits for any three consecutive years within a ten-year window from the date of incorporation. The scheme is designed to support emerging businesses in their formative years, encouraging innovation, job creation, and wealth generation.

Of the total approvals, 75 startups were cleared during the 79th IMB meeting and 112 during 80th such meeting. With this, over 3,700 startups have now been granted exemptions since the scheme's inception.

In a key announcement during the Union Budget 2025-26, the Government extended the eligibility window for startups to claim benefits under Section 80-IAC. Startups incorporated before 1st April, 2030 are now eligible to apply, giving more time and opportunity to new ventures to benefit from this financial relief.

Pertinently, the revised evaluation framework introduced by DPIIT has made the application process more structured and transparent. Complete applications are now reviewed within 120 days, ensuring faster decision-making and reducing procedural delays.

Startups that were not approved in the latest round have been encouraged to reassess and refine their applications. The DPIIT has advised applicants to focus on demonstrating technological innovation, market potential, scalability, and a clear contribution to employment and economic growth.

The Government's continued support underlines its commitment to fostering a robust, future-ready startup environment aligned with the vision of a self-reliant and innovation-led New India.

An effort to conserve and utilize Island's native diversity

CIARI registers Germplasm of Woody Pepper at NBPGR, New Delhi

ICAR-CIARI has been working on systematic evaluation and bio-prospection of these native species to identify their potential for food, medicine as well as a source of livelihood to the local farmers.

One such unique species- woody pepper is locally known as choi jhaal in the Islands. This wild relative of black pepper has been present in these Islands, however, only a few people were aware about the edible property of it. Systematic studies on this species at CIARI suggested that the stem pieces of this species are a source of important bioactive molecules including - piperine (a known bioavailability enhancer of herbal origin) and antioxidants.

Considering the local popularity of this species and its potential as a source of livelihood to the Island farmers, it was identified as a novel crop for the islands. The crop was christened by the researchers at CIARI as woody pepper to give it an international identity.

The botanical identity of the species; however, remained unclear and hence, researchers at CIARI adopted the modern technique of DNA barcoding and established the identity of the species as Piper pendulispicum- a species of Vietnam and Thailand, which was so far not reported from any part of India.

In simpler words, woody pepper was identified as a species which is new for the country, thereby opening avenues for its promotion in the Islands as a novel crop. To promote its cultivation in the Islands, serpentine layering of multiplication, protected cultivation were standardized, and postharvest products were developed at CIARI to improve its shelf life. A large number of farmers have started its cultivation, which is a positive sign for its conservation and sustainable utilization. In order to register this unique genetic resource at national level, Dr. Ajit Arun Waman and Dr. Pooja Bohra, Senior Scientists, ICAR-CIARI made consolidated efforts under the guidance of the Director, Dr. Eaknath B. Chakurkar, and a collection of it was registered as a novel germplasm (INGR 25029) at ICAR-National Bureau of Plant Genetic Resources, New Delhi.

This step would help in conserving this unique germplasm of the Islands apart from promoting its cultivation for the benefit of the Island farmers. Interested farmers can procure the quality planting material of woody pepper from Horticultural Plants Propagation Unit of ICAR-CIARI, Bathu Basti. Further, farmers from North and Middle Andaman could also get planting material from a progressive farmer, Shri Laxman Das, Kalipur, Diglipur, who has adopted the technology of serpentine layering developed at CIARI for mass multiplication of the crop, a press release from CIARI said.
